PLAN SERVICE FOR JEWISH NEW YEAR

Local Congregation To Give Program Tonight; Stores Will Close Saturday

To celebrate the Jewish New Year, Rosh Hashanah, local Jewish residents will hold a special service in the temple rooms in the Marion National bank building at 7:30 o'clock tonight, it was announced today.

All local stores operated by Jewish residents will be closed Saturday until 5:30 p. m. when they will reopen for the Saturday night trade.

Today the year 5689 of the Jewish calendar is being ushered in with special services among people of the faith throughout the world.

A bulletin released by the Central Conference of American Rabbis and Union of American Hebrew congregations explains that observance of the occasion dates back to the earliest times and originally was associated with the beginning of the agricultural year.

Significance of Day

In Rabbinic literature this holiday is regarded as the commemoration of the beginning of the creation of the world. It is the day upon which all the creatures of the world pass for judgment before the Creator. This idea of New Year as the great Day of Judgment gave rise to a beautiful and elaborate ritual throughout the middle ages. It fashioned this holiday into a solemn occasion upon which every Jew is to reawaken within himself his loyalty to the teachings of Judaism. And, finally, it was emphasized that the New Year is a day for self-examination and reflection upon past deeds—a day upon which man searches the inner recesses of his heart and sincerely resolves to turn from all misdeeds of the past year. This idea runs through almost every prayer of the Reform Jewish ritual for the day.

His 55th Fair

Jacob Retterer Holds Record as Veteran Exhibitor and Attendant at Marion County's Annual Exposition

—Courtesy Ohio State Journal

JACOB RETTERER

Without question the oldest exhibitor and one of the oldest visitors at the Marion county fair his week was Jacob Retterer, of Claridon. Mr. Retterer has passed his eighty-second milestone and has never missed a county fair here in the last 55 years.

Just five years more than half a century ago Mr. Retterer joined the Marion County Agricultural society. He has probably had more exhibits at the fair than any other person.

Raises Choice Potatoes

This year Mr. Retterer took special pride in his potato display. He had a number of varieties on exhibition; all of which he raised on his truck farm near Claridon. There wasn't a horse in the patch all summer, according to Mr. Retterer. He cultivated the tubers entirely by hoe.

"I can't hold a plow any longer," Mr. Reterer said, but the blue ribbons on his potato exhibits indicates that he can still wield a hoe effectively.

Harvest Bouquets

Included in Mr. Retterer's display are a number of wheat, oats and red clover bouquets which he made during the recent harvest. They are the first he ever made, he said, and he hopes to be able to make better ones next year. In the photograph shown above he is holding one of the bouquets displayed this year.

Mr. Retterer's father, George Retterer, was one of the drivers on the old Columbus-Sandusky stage coach line. The father was also a former Marion county commissioner. He was in office when the present courthouse was built. His name is engraved on the marble cornerstone on the southwest corner of the building.

JONES SWAMPS HIS OPPONENT IN MEET

Tom Perkins, British Champion, and George Voigt Stage Titanic Struggle

West Newton, Mass., Sept. 14—Tom Perkins, British champion, and George Voigt, the medalist, staged a titanic struggle in the semi-final round of the national amateur golf championship today, Perkins finishing one up at the end of the morning round of 18 holes. Voigt fought his way to this point with a melodramatic comeback after losing four of the first five holes and being three down at the turn and four down at the twelfth. He won the thirteenth and fifteenth with birdies, however, and sixteenth with a par 4, the last two holes being halved.

Meantime, Bobby Jones had swamped young Phillips Finlay in the other semi-final almost as badly as he had repulsed the despairing John Beck of England, yesterday. Bobby finished the morning round in no less than eight up the champion equalling the low round of the tournament with a 70. He also had a 70 against Beck yesterday.

SPEEDY ACTION TAKEN AGAINST PAUL JAWARSKI

Wounds Another Officer and Bystander in Bloody Cleveland Battle

REMOVAL BLOCKED

Report Escaped and Convicted Murderer Planned To Aid Imprisoned Brother

Cleveland, Sept. 14—In one of the quickest indictments on record, the county grand jury here today returned a charge of murdering a police officer against Paul Jawarski, notorious slayer, who yesterday killed Patrolman Anthony Wisowsek.

The indictment was apparently obtained to prevent Jawarski's removal to Pennsylvania. The penalty for conviction on such a charge is the same as in first degree murder, according to county officials.

Though in a serious condition, and partially paralyzed by the bullet which entered his skull, Jawarski was removed this morning from St. Alexis City hospital, where he was to be closely questioned.

Assistant Chief Prosecutor Andrew Parks of Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, who came here with other Pennsylvania officers as soon as he learned that the notorious criminal had been captured, says Jawarski has admitted that he was preparing to return to Pittsburgh and "shoot his brother out of jail with a machine gun," when he was captured here.

Telling Truth, Belief

Police are convinced that Jawarski is telling the truth when he says he had collected a number of guns and ammunition in his hideout here. Officials were "tipped" at once that Joe Vasbinder, Jawarski's pal, had fled at the direction of Akron.

Jawarski, who is 27 and the real gun desperado who yesterday killed one policeman, wounded another, and probably fatally wounded a bystander before he was finally cornered, wounded and captured, was reported recovering today.

Meanwhile, police were searching the city's underworld haunts for Joe Vasbinder, Jawarski's pal, who escaped during the battle. The two shot their way out of the Allegheny county jail in Pittsburgh, Aug. 18, 1927. Vasbinder, also a killer, is under sentence to the electric chair in Pennsylvania, according to reports received here.

Rewards totalling $10,000 have been offered for their capture since their daring jail break of more than a year ago, but the two have continued to elude authorities, while staging holdup after holdup in cities in various parts of the country.

Bloodiest Battle in Years

The capture of Jawarski yesterday was marked by the bloodiest and most prolonged gun battle the city has known in years. A Pittsburgh [illegible] was seated at the counter of a [illegible] east side restaurant when the two notorious gunmen entered. Recognizing them from newspaper pictures, the Pittsburgher rose, told the waitress he would return later, left the restaurant and telephoned police.

Two minutes later a patrol [illegible] drew up with [illegible] policemen. Vasbinder dashed out the back door, but Jawarski drew his gun, stepped to the door and began shooting. Patrolman Anthony Wisowsek, the first to alight from the automobile, fell dead [illegible] four of the killer's bullets in his [illegible].

Patrolman George F. [illegible] dropped with a bullet wound in the chest. Though still in a serious condition today, it was believed he will recover. Dozens of fellow police have offered their blood to the [illegible]. Zillinger's condition requires a [illegible] operation.

Crosley Says Reassignments Mean Elimination of Station

Cincinnati, Sept. 14—Voicing his belief that "the radio commission does not have the proper picture of the situation as it exists in Cincinnati," Powel Crosley, Jr., president of the Crosley Radio Corp., in a statement issued here today appealed to radio listeners to direct protests to the commission at Washington against a rearrangement of wavelengths and their allocation in behalf of stations WLW and WSAI, Cincinnati.

Crosley declared that if plans of the radio commission to have the two stations divide time on the same wavelength become effective, it will mean the elimination of one of the stations.

City Officials Renew Plea for Safeguarding Children Against Traffic Accidents

Tragic Death of Richard Dorfe Brings Urgent Calls for Parents and School Instructors To Emphasize Warnings to Youngsters; Safety Drive Given Impetus

An urgent appeal was made today by city officials for co-operation of parents and school instructors in an effort to safeguard the lives of children against traffic accidents, following the tragic death of Richard Dorfe, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Grover C. Dorfe, 365 Blaine av., when he was struck by an automobile yesterday.

With the fact clearly realized that many traffic accidents in which children are involved result from roller skating and playing in the street and failure of the youngsters to observe approaching automobiles while crossing from one side to the other, officials today laid stress on the importance of training and warning the child in the home and the school room.

Belief that motorists will do their part in a safety campaign was shared by heads of the various departments of the city government, who stated that co-operation of the parents and teachers with the law enforcement heads would be the deciding factor in lessening the number of deaths of children from traffic accidents in the future.

Chief Issues Warning

A general warning to all school pupils of the city to cross streets only at the intersections and to watch carefully for approaching cars, was issued by Chief J. W. Thompson, of the city police department today.

"Many accidents occur and near casualties result from children dodging between automobiles parked in front of the school buildings when school has been dismissed," Chief Thompson declared. "It is a dangerous move for students to cross streets at other points than at intersections."

"Parents of the city should be warned to keep their children from playing and roller skating in the streets, regardless of light traffic," Mayor Earl Hazen declared today. "Before any more accidents occur from situations similar to the one which cost the life of Richard Dorfe yesterday, parents and teachers of our city schools should make a great effort to curb the mishaps by daily warnings."

Judge States Views

Education of the children through the parents and children is the most essential factor in cutting down the number of children's accidents in Marion.

That is the belief of W. R. Martin, Judge of the Marion municipal court. As a further assurance of handling the traffic problem for the safety of children, Judge Martin today advocated installation of a red light system on streets in the immediate vicinity of schools.

An increasing effort to warn children of the dangers of playing in the streets is being made throughout the city schools, according to a statement of Jesse H. Mason, superintendent, today. A certain time of each week is devoted to instruction and warnings to students on traffic accidents in all of the schools, Mr. Mason states.

"The greatest worry of the careful motorist in attempting to drive without mishaps is caused by children in the streets," W. R. Strayer, director of public safety, stated today. "At times it is utterly impossible to prevent an accident, especially when children decide to cross the street in front of an automobile."

Violations Continue

Even though various city officials believe that installation of the stop street plan in the city has prevented a large number of accidents, the number of violators at these points has not decreased to any great extent, according to police.

Approximately 1,200 license numbers of automobiles driven by motorists not observing the stop street ordinance have been reported since launching of the campaign against the violations, more than a month ago, Chief of Police Thompson said today. Daily additions are being made to the total by policemen stationed at the various intersections of the city.

EXONERATE DRIVER IN DORFE DEATH PROBE

Officials Find Merle Wise Not at Fault in Fatal Traffic Accident

Merle Wise, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Wise 120 Iten av. has been completely exonerated of responsibility in the death of Richard Dorfe 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Grover C. Dorfe, 365 Blaine av., who was killed when hit by a car driven by Wise at the intersection of West Columbia and Blaine avs., yesterday afternoon.

An investigation of the accident by Assistant City Solicitor Carter Patton and Chief of Police J. W. Thompson today revealed that the boy's death did not result from reckless driving on the part of Wise, the officials reported.

Further investigation of the mishap will be conducted by Assistant Solicitor Patton but no charges are expected to be filed against the driver of the car, it was stated. Three eye-witnesses of the accident have testified to police that Wise was not at fault when his car struck the boy.

According to the testimony given Chief of Police Thompson by the witnesses, the boy was roller skating west on West Columbia st. across the intersection of Blaine av. and Wise's Graham Paige sedan was being driven south on Blaine av.

The Dorfe boy is believed not to have noticed the car approaching until it was too late for him to stop. The handle on the right front door caught the boy directly under the chin and threw him back from the car to the pavement. Police say Wise attempted to avoid the accident by swerving the car to the right.

Following the accident Wise stopped his car within a space of 15 feet, according to police. This was given today by Chief Thompson as evidence that Wise was not speeding.

The boy died on the way to City hospital in the W. C. Boyd ambulance.

Funeral Saturday

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the home, in charge of the Rev. Herbert P. Weckmueller, pastor of First Reformed church. Burial will be in Marion cemetery.

The boy was born in this city, May 27, 1917. His father was originally from Van Wert, and the mother, who was formerly Miss Genevieve Evans, is a native of Marion. The child attended Sunday School at First Reformed church and was a student at Olney avenue school.

SOUTH IS SCENE OF BITTER PARTY FIGHT

Open Charges of "Carpet-Bagging" Made by Democrats

New York, Sept. 14 — Increasing daily in intensity and bitterness, the presidential campaign in the solid south today reached the hotpoint of open charges of "carpet-bagging" by the Democratic managers, and their immediate denial by members of the Republican eastern strategy board.

"The campaign in every southern state is entirely in the hands of the state organization," said Rep. John Q. Tilson, director of the eastern speakers' bureau, following a conference with Chairman Hubert Work of the Republican national committee.

Repeated charges from various Democratic sources that northern speakers were being sent into the south and that considerable money collected in northern Republican strongholds was being diverted to encourage the revolt of Democratic drys in the south, were discussed in the conference between Tilson and Work.

No speakers have been assigned to the south, save at the specific request of the Republican managers of the various states," Tilson declared.

"Even when speakers are requested, the national organization offers a wide selection of names for the consideration of the local committees, and the subject of the speeches is in every case left for the approval of the local committee.

"The same principle governs the campaign expenditures in the south. Everything is handled through the local committees."

Smith. The option was to expire Saturday.

Under the new management the concern will pursue the same policies as have been followed by the old company. It is understood that the new owners are completing addition of new equipment to increase the output. At the present time the capacity of the plant is 75 tons of ice and refrigerators every 24 hours.

First Local Ice Enterprise

The Marion Ice & Cold Storage Co. is Marion's oldest and first ice manufacturing concern. It was first incorporated in November, 1892 for $25,000. The original incorporators were Frank S. Keller, George B. Christian, Sr., Nathan Mezger, Simon G. Kleinmaier and James I. Elliott. In 1902 the capital stock was increased to $50,000 and in 1912 to $100,000.

The late F. S. Keller was president and manager of the concern until 1923. At his death the active management was taken over by C. H. Elliott. Mr. Elliott has served as treasurer of the organization since 1900.

The retiring members of the board of directors are C. H. Elliott, president and treasurer; H. Strehlz, J. G. Leffler, R. H. Reidenbaugh, J. F. Dombaugh, C. R. McMurray and E. H. Keller.

Mr. Elliott will continue in the employ of the new concern for the next several weeks. After that he will take a vacation before deciding on a new line of work.

DIES OF FRIGHT

Apoplexy Induced When Woman's Hands Are Caught in Washer

Newark, Sept. 14—Literally "frightened to death," Miss Emma Davis, 53, is dead today, victim of a domestic tragedy in her home at Hebron, near here, yesterday.

The woman's body, with both hands crushed and her clothing tangled in an electric washer, was found at her home by Frederick Nichols.

After an investigation, Coroner C. F. Legge and Sheriff Carl Foulk stated that when the woman was caught in the machinery she became so frightened that apoplexy was induced, causing her death.

Speedy Action Taken Against Paul Jawarski After Fatal Gun Battle

ran through the rear door. Two bullets found him, but did not hamper his flight.

A lengthy chase followed. The fugitive, occasionally turning to shoot back at his pursuers, fled through alleys and across lots. Someone saw him run in to a house. The police followed Jawarski jumped from a second story window, 25 feet to the ground. The police left the house, unaware that Jawarski had reentered through a side door.

A woman ran out, or among that a man had hidden under a bed. Reserves were arriving by this time and a cordon of 50 policemen was thrown around the dwelling. The criminal locked himself in one room and defied his pursuers.

"Come and get me," he shouted.

Police broke several windows and threw tear gas bombs into the house. A few minutes later, Jawarski, gasping and wiping his eyes, appeared at the front door. Patrolman Yaro Kondela leveled his sawed-off shotgun, pressed the trigger, and the desperado fell. He had thrown away one pistol during his flight, but still had a second and a quantity of ammunition.

Though hit by two pistol bullets and four shotgun slugs, his pulse and respiration were reported normal this morning.

In April, 1927, Jawarski was convicted of first degree murder for the killing of Ross Dennis guard at the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Co., who was shot when the Jawarski gang staged an $80,000 holdup near Mollenaur, Pa. He was also to be sentenced for the confessed killing of Isaiah Gump in another robbery.

He boasted that he would never be executed and though no one was killed when he and Vashinder escaped from the Allegheny prison, Jawarski is said to have run through the corridors of the jail, brandishing a pistol and shouting, "Where is the warden?"

Detective Reddington of Allegheny county and Police Lieutenant Gray of McKeesport, Pa. arrived here last night. Cleveland authorities said unless they were assured that the killer would be summarily dealt with in Pennsylvania, they would not turn him over to Pennsylvania police.

Questioned by detectives when he regained consciousness last night, Jawarski said he and Vashinder had planned a series of robberies here and that they had half-dozen guns and a quantity of ammunition in their room. He spoke vaguely of a woman who accompanied them here, but insisted that his wife lives in Detroit. Detectives have been unable to find the place where he and Vashinder lived here.

Sophie Tucker to Do "Singie" for Warners

NEWS OF MOVIES IN CINEMA CAPITAL

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Star Staff Correspondent

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 14—Sophie Tucker, jazz singer and ragtime favorite, has been signed by Warner brothers to make a motion picture for them. I stumbled upon this bit of news inadvertently and only when I learned that another company was trying to negotiate for Sophie's services.

She will vitaphone, of course. I understand a story fitting her personality, much as the one that has been prepared for Texas Guinan, will introduce her to the picture going public. She won't be here for some months yet so that no director has been signed, neither is the story written. But she is going to do her stuff and plenty.

MANY a true thing is said in jest. D. W. Griffith, perspiring in the hot sun while he directed a boat scene on the Tiber River, said just by way of conversation, "I am going to do 'Genesis' for my next picture. It's going to be a dissertation on women. When Eve was a girl," said Mr. Griffith, "the women controlled the world and I would like to show that they are again in power." There was much laughter in this sally, but who knows—Mr. Griffith may be harboring an idea in the innermost recesses of that fertile mind of his.

dawn cometh and goeth, and the afternoon findeth him upon the golf links.

He resolveth, each day, to be calm and serene and unmoved by trifles. Yet, alas, when his stenographer arriveth ten minutes late, she findeth him pacing the office in a brainstorm. And when his wife summoneth him upon the telephone, while he is in conference, she is met with a tempest of reproach.

He saith, "Today will I go upon a reducing diet!" And at breakfast he scorneth the tempting bacon and the innocent muffin. Yet, at high noon, he cryeth, "I am hungry as a wolf! Go to. I can no longer endure this strain." And his order is roast beef and potatoes and rice pudding!

How, then, shall any woman understand the man whom she loveth?

For today, yesterday and forever he is animated by his higher aspirations and his finer ideals. But all the days of his life he is ruled by his little weaknesses and LED by his impulses!

Yea, verily, he is as a canoe trying to make the shore in a west wind!

liceman, Jawarski said, though admitting it had been his ambition to kill six. Many of his victims, he related, were killed during private quarrels.

John Zavworski, who recognized Jawarski when he and Vashinder entered a restaurant yesterday, and telephoned police, knew Jawarski when he sang in the choir of a little Ukrainian church in Butler, Pa., years ago, it was learned today.

Zavworski and Jawarski looked at each other, but neither gave any sign of recognition, according to the former's account. Zavworski walked quietly away to an outside telephone booth. He says he thinks the gunman followed, but for some reason did not molest him, and then returned to the restaurant and continued with his meal. Zavworski did not return.

Today, after his connection with the capture had been made public, Zavworski told police that he feared the underworld would seek him out and exact the usual penalty of the "squealer."

Marysville School District To Vote On Special Bond Issue

$165,000 ASKED FOR NEW HIGH SCHOOL

Lack of Space Makes Holding of Classes in Basements Necessary

ENROLLMENT HIGH

Similar Proposition Carried in City Last Year, but Lost in District

Marysville, Sept. 14— Because of present conditions in Marysville, a special bond issue for $165,000 to provide for a high school building, will be submitted to the voters of the Marysville school district, which includes the township, in the coming election, it was announced today.

The bond issue will provide for the purchase of a site for a new building, the erection of the building and equipping of it.

The announcement was made yesterday by J. G Bittikofer and followed discussions by members in its effort to relieve present conditions.

Classes in Basements

The overcrowded condition of industrial arts and the fact that below the Marysville standard as they now are for the state, according to the superintendent, is against the law to conduct classes in the basement of any building, at present a number of classes are being conducted in that manner because of lack of adequate room in the regular classrooms, he pointed out.

He pointed out that there are 590 pupils in Marysville high school, with seating space in the present building to accomodate 190 pupils. The state inspector for the state department of industrial relations, in his report on the West building here at the close of the last school year, ordered changes made.

Classes at Library

Certain departments of the high school have been moved from the second floor basement and manual training classes are being conducted in the basement of the public library. The pupils are using rooms in the basement for dressing rooms.

Crowded conditions in the grades and the high school are greater than ever before, the enrollment at present being 593 are in the high school and the number is expected to increase by the end of the week. There are 450 grade pupils.

To House High School

It was announced by the board of education the erection of a new senior high school is to accomodate the freshmen and seniors of the high school. Then the second floor of the West building, now occupied by the high school, would be used by the Junior high, consisting of the eighth and ninth grades and freshman class.

The growth of the present Marysville school district has been such as to take in all of Paris township, the number of pupils in which is increasing.

The bond issue for a new high school in Marysville corporation but was defeated in

City Officials Renew Plea for Safeguarding Children Against Traffic Accidents

Tragic Death of Richard Dorfe Brings Urgent Calls for Parents and School Instructors To Emphasize Warnings to Youngsters; Safety Drive Given Impetus

An urgent appeal was made today by city officials for co-operation of parents and school instructors in an effort to safeguard the lives of children against traffic accidents, following the tragic death of Richard Dorfe, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Grover C. Dorfe, 365 Blaine av., when he was struck by an automobile yesterday.

With the fact clearly realized that many traffic accidents in which children are involved result from roller skating and playing in the street and failure of the youngsters to observe approaching automobiles while crossing from one side to the other, officials today laid stress on the importance of training and warning the child in the home and the school room.

Belief that motorists will do their part in a safety campaign was shared by heads of the various departments of the city government, who stated that co-operation of the parents and teachers with the law enforcement heads would be the deciding factor in lessening the number of deaths of children from traffic accidents in the future.

Chief Issues Warning

A general warning to all school pupils of the city to cross streets only at the intersections and to watch carefully for approaching cars, was issued by Chief J. W. Thompson, of the city police department today.

"Many accidents occur and near casualties result from children dodging between automobiles parked in front of the school buildings when school has been dismissed," Chief Thompson declared. "It is a dangerous move for students to cross streets at other points than at intersections."

"Parents of the city should be warned to keep their children from playing and roller skating in the streets, regardless of light traffic," Mayor Earl Hazen declared today. "Before any more accidents occur from situations similar to the one which cost the life of Richard Dorfe yesterday, parents and teachers of our city schools should make a great effort to curb the mishaps by daily warnings."

Judge States Views

Education of the children through the parents and children is the most essential factor in cutting down the number of children's accidents in Marion.

That is the belief of W. R. Martin, judge of the Marion municipal court. As a further assurance of handling the traffic problem for the safety of children, Judge Martin today advocated installation of a red light system on streets in the immediate vicinity of schools.

An increasing effort to warn children of the dangers of playing in the streets is being made throughout the city schools, according to a statement of Jesse H. Mason, superintendent, today. A certain time of each week is devoted to instruction and warnings to students on traffic accidents in all of the schools, Mr. Mason states.

"The greatest worry of the careful motorist in attempting to drive without mishaps is caused by children in the streets," W. B. Strayer, director of public safety, stated today. "At times it is utterly impossible to prevent an accident, especially when children decide to cross the street in front of an automobile."

Violations Continue

Even though various city officials believe that installation of the stop street plan in the city has prevented a large number of accidents, the number of violators at these points has not decreased to any great extent, according to police.

Approximately 1,200 license numbers of automobiles driven by motorists not observing the stop street ordinance have been reported since launching of the campaign against the violations, more than a month ago, Chief of Police Thompson said today. Daily additions are being made to the total by policemen stationed at the various intersections of the city.

EXONERATE DRIVER IN DORFE DEATH PROBE

Officials Find Merle Wise Not at Fault in Fatal Traffic Accident

Merle Wise, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Wise 120 Reed av. has been completely exonerated of responsibility in the death of Richard Dorfe 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Grover C. Dorfe, 365 Blaine av., who was killed when hit by a car driven by Wise at the intersection of West Columbia and Blaine avs., yesterday afternoon.

An investigation of the accident by Assistant City Solicitor Carter Patton and Chief of Police J. W. Thompson today revealed that the boy's death did not result from reckless driving on the part of Wise, the officials reported.

Further investigation of the mishap will be conducted by Assistant Solicitor Patton but no charges are expected to be filed against the driver of the car, it was stated. Three eye-witnesses of the accident have testified to police that Wise was not at fault when his car struck the boy.

According to the testimony given Chief of Police Thompson by the witnesses, the boy was roller skating west on West Columbia st. across the intersection of Blaine av. and Wise's Graham Paige sedan was being driven south on Blaine av.

The Dorfe boy is believed not to have noticed the car approaching until it was too late for him to stop. The fender on the right front door caught the boy directly under the chin and threw him back from the car to the pavement. Police say Wise attempted to avoid the accident by swerving the car to the right.

Following the accident Wise stopped his car within a space of 15 feet, according to police. This was given today by Chief Thompson as evidence that Wise was not speeding.

The boy died on the way to City hospital in the W. C. Boyd ambulance.

Funeral Saturday

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the home, in charge of the Rev. Herbert F. Weckmueller, pastor of First Reformed church. Burial will be in Marion cemetery.

The boy was born in this city, May 27, 1917. His father was originally from Van Wert, and the mother, who was formerly Miss Genevieve Evans, is a native of Marion. The child attended Sunday School at First Reformed church and was a student at Olney avenue school.

Sophie Tucker to Do "Singie" for Warners

NEWS OF MOVIES IN CINEMA CAPITAL

By LOUELA O. PARSONS
Star Staff Correspondent

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 14—Sophie Tucker, jazz singer and ragtime favorite, has been signed by Warner brothers to make a motion picture for them. I stumbled upon this bit of news inadvertently and only when I learned that another company was trying to negotiate for Sophie's services.

She will vitaphone, of course. I understand a story fitting her personality, much as the one that has been prepared for Texas Guinan, will introduce her to the picture going public. She won't be here for some months yet so that no director has been signed, neither is the story written. But she is going to do her stuff and plenty.

MANY a true thing is said in jest. D. W. Griffith, perspiring in the hot sun while he directed a boat scene on the Tiber River, said just by way of conversation, "I am going to do 'Genesis' for my next picture. It's going to be a dissertation on women. When Eve was a girl," said Mr. Griffith, "the women controlled the world and I would like to show that they are again in power." There was much laughter in this sally, but who knows—Mr. Griffith may be harboring an idea in the innermost recesses of that fertile mind of his.

liceman, Jawarski said, though admitting it had been his ambition to kill six. Many of his victims, he related, were killed during private quarrels.

John Zavworski, who recognized Jawarski when he and Vasbinder entered a restaurant yesterday, and telephoned police, knew Jawarski when he sang in the choir of a little Ukrainian church in Butler, Pa., years ago, it was learned today.

Zavworski and Jawarski looked at each other, but neither gave any sign of recognition, according to the former's account. Zavworski walked quietly away to an outside telephone booth. He says he thinks the gunman followed, but for some reason did not molest him, and then returned to the restaurant and continued with his meal. Zavworski did not return.

Today, after his connection with the capture had been made public, Zavworski told police that he feared the underworld would seek him out and exact the usual penalty of the "squealer."

SOUTH IS SCENE OF BITTER PARTY FIGHT

Open Charges of "Carpet-Bagging" Made by Democrats

New York, Sept. 14 — Increasing daily in intensity and bitterness, the presidential campaign in the solid south today reached the hotpoint of open charges of "carpet-bagging" by the Democratic managers, and their immediate denial by members of the Republican eastern strategy board.

"The campaign in every southern state is entirely in the hands of the state organization," said Rep. John Q. Tilson, director of the eastern speakers' bureau, following a conference with Chairman Hubert Work of the Republican national committee.

Repeated charges from various Democratic sources that northern speakers were being sent into the south and that considerable money collected in northern Republican strongholds was being diverted to encourage the revolt of Democratic drys in the south, were discussed in the conference between Tilson and Work.

"No speakers have been assigned to the south, save at the specific request of the Republican managers of the various states," Tilson declared.

"Even when speakers are requested, the national organization offers a wide selection of names for the consideration of the local committees, and the subject of the speeches is in every case left for the approval of the local committee.

"The same principle governs the campaign expenditures in the south. Everything is handled through the local committees."

Smith. The option was to expire Saturday.

Under the new management the concern will pursue the same policies as have been followed by the old company. At the present time the capacity of the plant is 75 tons of ice and refrigerators every 24 hours.

First Local Ice Enterprise

The Marion Ice & Cold Storage Co. is Marion's oldest and first ice manufacturing concern. It was first incorporated in November, 1892 for $25,000. The original incorporators were Frank S. The late F. S. Keiler was president and manager of the concern until 1925. At his death the active management was taken over by C. H. Elliott. Mr. Elliott has served as treasurer of the organization since 1900.

The retiring members of the board of directors are C. H. Elliott, president and treasurer; H. Strelitz, J. G. Leffler, R. H. Reidenbaugh, J. F. Dombaugh, C. R. McMurray and E. H. Keiler.

The woman's body, with both hands crushed and her clothing tangled in an electric washer, was found at her home by Frederick Nichols.

GRAND JURY INDICTS PATROLMAN'S SLAYER

ran through the rear door. Two bullets found him, but did not hamper his flight.

A lengthy chase followed. The fugitive, occasionally turning to shoot back at his pursuers, fled through alleys and across lots. Someone saw him run into a house. The police followed. Jawarski jumped from a two story window, 25 feet to the ground. The police left the house, unaware that Jawarski had reentered through a side door.

A woman ran out, and among that a man had hidden under a bed. Reserves were arriving by this time and a cordon of 50 policemen was thrown around the dwelling. The criminal locked himself in one room and defied his pursuers.

"Come and get me," he shouted.

Police broke several windows and threw tear gas bombs into the home. A few minutes later, Jawarski, gasping and wiping his eyes, appeared at the front door. Patrolman Yaro Kudela leveled his sawed off shotgun, pressed the trigger, and the desperado fell. He had thrown away one pistol during his flight, but still had a second and a quantity of ammunition.

Though hit by two pistol bullets and four shotgun slugs, his pulse and respiration were reported normal this morning.

In April, 1927, Jawarski was convicted of first degree murder for the killing of Ross Dennis guard at the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Co., who was shot when the Jawarski gang staged an $80,000 holdup near Mollenaur, Pa. He was also to be sentenced for the confessed killing of Isaiah Gump in another robbery.

He boasted that he would never be executed and though no one was killed when he and Vasbinder escaped from the Allegheny prison, Jawarski is said to have run through the corridors of the jail, brandishing a pistol and shouting, "Where is the warden?"

Detective Reddington of Allegheny county and Police Lieutenant Gray of McKeesport, Pa arrived here last night. Cleveland authorities said unless they were assured that the killer would be summarily dealt with in Pennsylvania, they would not turn him over to Pennsylvania police.

Questioned by detectives when he regained consciousness last night, Jawarski said he and Vasbinder had planned a series of robberies here and that they had half dozen guns and a quantity of ammunition in their room. He spoke vaguely of a woman who accompanied them here, but insisted that his wife lives in Detroit. Detectives have been unable to find the place where he and Vasbinder lived here.

OHIO CHURCH GROUP TO FAVOR HOOVER

Christian News, Council Organ, Takes Stand Against Smith

Columbus, Sept. 14—With the declaration that "Governor Smith has clearly defined the issue," the Ohio Christian News, official organ of the Ohio Council of Churches, was on record today as opposing Alfred E. Smith and favoring Herbert Hoover in their respective campaigns for the presidency.

The position of the Ohio Christian News was outlined in an editorial in the current issue of the church organ which follows, in part:

"With a choice of several possible paramount issues before him, the Democratic candidate has selected the (prohibition), as the one on which to wage his fight for the presidency. He has made his position clear and has avoided any appearance of sidestepping the issue. To make the picture of unflinching frankness complete, his managers need only to abandon their cries of 'religious bigotry' and their protests against the publication of the undenied facts of his past wet record."

Commenting on the placing of John J. Raskob in charge of Governor Smith's campaign the editorial states:

"Besides defining the issue, Gov. Smith has demonstrated that he expects this issue to break down the normal alignment of the two parties. He has placed a wet Republican, Mr. Raskob, in charge of his campaign, and he gives every indication of welcoming other support from the Republican ranks. If he is successful he must expect a like measure to lose the support of dry Democrats."

Pointing out that the Ohio Christian News has been "consistently Democratic in its editorial support of presidential candidates," the editorial continues:

"Just as consistently, therefore, as it has supported certain measures, such as the league of nations, which bore the Democratic brand, it will this year urge its readers for the sake of the maintenance of principles incorporated in vote for Hoover."

CLOSE RACES MARK THREE EVENTS

MARION COUNTY FAIR SPEED PROGRAM TO CLOSE HERE TODAY

Harry Evans Takes Things Easy To Win Trot; Others Forced

BY KARL R. M'ELROY
Sports Editor, The Star

THREE close races in which only one horse was able to win in straight heats featured the four event speed program presented at the Marion County Fair yesterday afternoon.

With three races scheduled to get under way at 1 o'clock, the meet will be concluded this afternoon. Every event is well filled, judges announced this morning.

Harry Evans with Carpenter in the sulky had an easy time of it in the classified pace for three year olds sweeping ahead of all opposition to take three firsts. Otto May, who was quite a favorite with the fans, could do no better than finish second in the initial heat. Finishing third in the first round, Baby Cruise was driven by Morris to two seconds in the last heats.

After winning the first two heats, Peter Cowl, popular favorite, dropped down to fifth in the 2:10 trot when Dick Chennault flashed across the wire in the third heat. The McMillan driven stallion made the mile of the second heat in 2:12¾.

Getting away to a poor start in the first heat to finish fifth, Wilson drove King Voilo to two straight wins in the final heats to cop the big end of the purse in the 2:20 trot. The winner's best time was 2:12¼ made in the final heat.

The best race of the day was the 2:18 pace in which Anna Direct won in straight heats. The best time for this event was 2:11¼. Three horses took second places in the three heats.

CAN YOU JUDGE A GOOD SMOKE?

We Want Your Opinion of This 5c Cigar

Havana Ribbon is its name . . . a cigar—for five cents!—that from end to end contains nothing but fully-ripe middle leaves of choice tobacco plants. No bitter under-ripe top leaves; no flat-tasting over-ripe bottom leaves. But quality tobacco captured just when Nature has given it its truest, mellowest, mildest flavor and aroma. And long-filler tobacco at that! No short ends to crumble in your mouth.

We contend that Havana Ribbon is without doubt the greatest five-cent value that has ever come out of a cigar factory. See if you don't agree with us—try Havana Ribbon. Never mind wondering how such cigar goodness is possible for a nickel (immense production and genuine manufacturing sincerity are the reasons, if you insist on knowing). Judge Havana Ribbon solely on smoking enjoyment and money-saving value. Also Practical Pocket Package of five cigars.

Three Marion Students At Wesleyan Given Chance To Make Bishop Grid Eleven

Rex Miller, Girard av., and Jack Doubly, South State st., Out for Second Year; Joe Rinnert Promising Sophomore Candidate for Tackle Berth

DELAWARE, Sept. 14—Three Marion students are included among the group of some 50 players upon whom Coach George Gauthier is counting in preparation for Ohio Wesleyan university's 1928 football campaign.

Rex Miller, 605 Girard av., and Jack Doubly, 222 South State st., were members of the Battling Bishops squad last year; Miller is a candidate for center and Doubly is a guard. Both will be juniors this year. Joe Rinnert, 211 Reed av., is a very promising sophomore candidate at tackle. Rinnert was an outstanding player on the line for the freshman team at Ohio Wesleyan last year.

Coach Gauthier regards football prospects at Ohio Wesleyan as good this season as he has a dozen lettermen who are expected to return to the university, including a wealth of seasoned backfield material. He will have two or three vacancies to fill in the center of the line.

The only backfield problems at Ohio Wesleyan this year will be found in developing a quarterback and in choosing a starting lineup from among the several veteran halfbacks and fullbacks available. Merwin Breese, Mt Gilead, 180 pound halfback, who won his letter last year, will be given a chance to switch to quarterback this season, and the Bishops have another possible signal caller in Ervin Carlisle, a sophomore and former all Columbus high school player.

Don't bank too strongly on those easy going people. They may be hard to stop.

If you would be happy and content never borrow trouble or lend money.

Former Secretary, Harvard Sophomore, Englishman and Jones Remain in Tourney

America's Bobby Finds Key to Brae Burn's Mysteries and Is Being Favored To Win National Amateur Golf Championship

By DAVIS J. WALSH

WEST NEWTON, Mass., Sept. 14—One Englishman, with the aspect of a school master and the fighting punch of a stevedore; one Harvard sophomore, slightly more tenacious in the average hangnail; one reformed private secretary whose golf was too good to waste upon the keys of a typewriter and the inevitable survivor, this man Jones they are always talking about.

These gentlemen were all that was left of an original field of 143 when the semi final round of the National Amateur golf championship opened this morning with two matches scheduled for 36 holes each.

In the first of these Tom Perkins, champion of Great Britain and fast coming into general recognition, as a worthy one, was to face George Voigt, the former aide to wealth and social distinction. In the other this man Jones will play Phillips Finlay, youthful and, therefore, dangerous. Sometimes, there is nothing quite so exalted as the confidence of a youth who is tasting the elixir of his first important victory. However, it is doubtful whether even a hard sophomore would consider himself justified in feeling hardly the slightest bit overconfident in going in there with this man Jones.

Finds Key to Course

Besides the common impression today was that Jones at last had found the key to Brae Burn's mysteries. There was no alternate impression to be gained as a matter of fact, after his record of three under par for the 23 holes needed yesterday to win that gripping struggle by 14 and 13 from John Beck, the unfortunate Englishman.

Jones was so typically Jones that he would have been nine up on Finlay at the end of 23 holes, matching Jones' card with that turned in by Finlay against Johnson. And on the same basis of comparison, he would have been four up on Perkins and seven up on Voigt.

Mistakes will happen of course, and I certainly don't wish to break my record by making one now, but still I feel impelled to state that every sign points an index finger toward another victory for the automaton, thus giving him four amateur titles of the last five contested. It also would round out a six-year dynasty, during which this man Jones never as known what it is to be without at least one major championship.

His record over this interval follows:
1923—National open champion.
1924—National amateur champion.
1925—National amateur champion and tie for open title, but beaten on play off.
1926—British open champion, National open champion and reached final for amateur title.
1927 British open champion and National amateur champion.
1928—Tied for national open title, but beaten on play-off.

Young Ones Dangerous

No doubt he won't thank me for counting some chickens that still are in the incubator. And, in truth, there is no forecasting the performance of a young opponent who might get the idea that he is a man of destiny or something. Those kind never are easy to beat, as Johnston discovered on the late holes yesterday and as Ouimet discovered in the first round.

Finlay was three down to Francis at the end of nine holes, but beat him home. He was "down" to Johnston nearly all the way, being a hole behind finally with only five to play. Yet he won again with a couple of miraculous recoveries from trouble. Anyone who can beat a pair of great stars like Ouimet and Johnston in as many days simply isn't out of it until one puts him out and keeps him there.

Voight, of course, needs no curtain calls. The most discussed American amateur next to Jones and Von Elm, he seemed to "hot" for the first time in championship play. Since winning the medal play with a 71 and a 72, his play has become as spotty as an old vest. Yet it was good enough to beat Sweetser, former British and American champion, on Wednesday and Dr. O. F. Willing, notorious as a fighting golfer, in yesterday's third round.

However, he undoubtedly has picked up a live one in Perkins. The latter, they say, has much to learn about the principles of the golf swing, but it is evident that he has come far in this country since the disaster he suffered at the hands of this man Jones in the Walker cup matches.

His records at Brae Burn, including an extra hole victory over dangerous Don McMoe and decisions over Arthur Yates, conqueror of Von Elm, and John Dawson amply proved this contention.

After all it may be better to spend as you go than to lend on the same principle.

A man doesn't have to tie a string around his finger to remind himself that his hands are tied.

At Boston—Al Mello, New England welterweight champion, stopped Billy Murphy, of Lowell, Mass. (5).

At Chicago—Lew Marriner, University of Illinois heavyweight, knocked out Jack McAuliffe of Detroit (6).

CORBETT IS AWARDED DECISION OVER BAKER IN 12-ROUND BATTLE

Mercer Believes Sergeant Should Have Been Given Fight

NEW YORK, Sept 14—They pulled another decision out of a hat last night at Madison Square Garden and when Young Corbett's name came up first he was awarded an undeserved victory over Sergeant Sammy Baker after 12 rounds of hair-trigger marksmanship.

Baker won six clear rounds and three were even. Corbett took the second, third and seventh and if there was a shade in the fourth it was his.

Now the three officials—Referee Lou Magnolia and Judges Tom Flynn and George Kelly—arrived at the weird verdict is a mystery. It certainly was as sour a break as Baker ever got in his career, for he was fighting to establish his long awaited chance at Joe Dundee and the welterweight title.

Corbett took the seventh round by slamming the Sergeant to the mat with a terrific left hook to the pit of the stomach. For a moment it appeared that the gallant Samuel would have to chuck the fight. Gasping and rubbing his body with his gloves, he remained on his knees to the count of 9. Then he came back to hold the Californian even in the eighth and went on to capture the next three rounds. The last was even.

Corbett was highly touted as a result of his knockout of Nick Testo on the Pacific coast a few weeks ago. The westerner came here with a reputation as the best left handed welterweight of all time.

He has to his credit, a draw and a decision over Jack Thompson, who recently stopped champion Joe Dundee.

With the exception of the one punch that floored Baker in the seventh Corbett did not live up to his advance notices. His left to the head is a downward chop that did not annoy Baker to any great extent. Sammy took most of them on top of the head.

The left hook to the body is Corbett's one haymaker. Aside from that he is a grabber and a holder. He marched the Sergeant backward the entire width of the ring many times. In close, however, Baker was his master. He lathered Corbett's sides with left hooks and rights and slashes to the liver.

London Streets Are "Paved With Gold" For Beggars Who Have Stage Ability

London, Sept. 14—For the begger with sufficient theatrical ability to exploit his trade thoroughly, London's pavements are paved with gold. Periodically cases are heard in court which reveal that the seedy, begrimed individual who stand on the curb imploring passersby to purchase a box of matches for a penny, are often persons of comfortable means.

One case that attracted wide attention was that of Ernest d'Enton, describing himself as an ex-service man who at his arraignment was charged with driving daily from Portsmouth to his place in London in a high-priced automobile.

D'Enton, shabbily dressed and presenting a woeful appearance, was in the habit of stationing himself before a department store or other busy place displaying a few boxes of matches in a battered suitcase. He carried a card on which was written: "My last hopes—wife and five children. Proofs given."

The sympathetic public gladly bought his wares, and so engaging were the beggar's ways when he was brought into conversation, that he received many handsome gifts from passersby.

On more than one occasion, the police revealed, some kind hearted stranger set D'Enton up in business but he failed to keep his appointments and always found his way back to the gutter. He often wrote letters to wealthy individuals begging them to aid in his "heart-breaking struggle to obtain a mere existence in this so-called Christian country."

At the court session, it was revealed that D'Enton's wife was an attractive woman, very smartly dressed.

D'Enton was ordered to leave the city within twenty-four hours. He promptly did so, and packed up for an unknown destination.

LONE BANDIT HOLDS UP 50 IN PULLMAN

Robs Passengers of Undetermined Amount of Cash and Belongings

Los Angeles, Sept. 14 — Sheriff posses were searching today for a lone bandit who last night herded 50 passengers into a Pullman car of the crack Southern Pacific "Lark," and under the threat of two steel-blue automatics robbed them of an undetermined amount of cash and personal belongings.

The robber was of slight build and young looking. He wore a black mask. Working swiftly, he lined up his victims and forced them to deposit their valuables in a sack he passed around. The holdup occurred as the crack San Francisco bound train sped between Los Angeles and Glendale.

As the train neared the outskirts of Glendale, traveling at the rate of 30 miles an hour, the bandit leaped into the darkness and disappeared. He is believed to have boarded the train at Los Angeles.

Striking similarity of last night's holdup to the robbery of Santa Fe train No. 8 between Los Angeles and Pasadena eight days ago caused police to believe the same man had staged both raids.

When the Unexpected Friend Drops In— Sugardale Pressed Ham

IT'S a real Ham treat—Sugardale Pressed Ham—a treat that will delight and satisfy your most "hard-to-fix-for" friend. And it's so easy to prepare, too. All you do is slice and serve.

Sugardale Pressed Ham is all pork—only choice lean pieces being used in its making. And the flavor is "cured" in. No spices are used. That's why its flavor is so fresh and sweet—why it has become a favorite for luncheons, dinners and the quick "pick-up" for the unexpected friend.

Sugardale Pressed Ham is on sale this week at all Sugardale stores as this week's Sugardale Special. Ask your dealer to let you see a loaf of it. Note the all-lean texture and the delicious pink of the fresh, selected pork. And be sure to take home enough so you'll have some left over for that unlooked-for caller.

You can plan an entire week's menu from this list of Sugardale Ready-to-Serve Meats:—

...ack of Moisture One of Most Damaging, Dr. Bennett Tells Kiwanis Club

Death of the majority of Marion ...ees in the past has been caused by ...e intense rays of the sun, lack of ...oisture and injuries sustained during ...e winter season.

This is the substance of a statement ...ade by Dr. C. G. Bennett, of the re...arch of pathology department of ...ooster college in an address on the subject of "Tree ..." at the noon luncheon of the K...wanis club at Hotel Har...ing yesterday.

"Many trees in Marion as well as other sections of the country die from the lack of ... for the roots to obtain ... out," Dr Bennett stated. Roots provide moisture for the tree and the crowding of roots prevents the from obtaining ... moisture to supply the trunk limbs and leaves.

The last year was one of the hard...st on life of the trees, according to Dr Bennett. Many trees died during the year from the effects of the wet weather late last fall which kept the trees growing into freezing weather.

During his address Dr Bennett explained the most common of the tree diseases in this part of the country. He declared that ... caused by fungus ... by unbound, but by ... of fungi and bacteria.

Following his talk Dr Bennett made a survey of the ... of the trees in the city. He was ... by Fire Chief T. J. McNu... and other members of the K...wanis club. He made a ... study of the tree ... here this morning before the luncheon.

He has a population of 238 to the square mile.

OFF TO HUNT LIONS IN AFRICA

Wearing lounge suit, a bowler hat and expression of relief, H. R. H., the Prince of Wales left Victoria station, London, for a 3,500 mile tour of East Africa. With his brother, Prince Henry, Duke of Gloucester, he will hunt big game and avoid formal receptions wherever possible. Above, l. to r., Prince Henry as an equestrian and an officer of the Royal Horse; right, Prince of Wales in uniform he wore in France; center, as honorary colonel of Scotch regiment, and, below, riding with Marshal Foch in parade which marked recent pilgrimage of British veterans to the western front in France.

Marion Boy Wins Long List of Honors at Summer Camp

Claude Perry, 18, son of Mr and Mrs. S. L. Perry, East Center st, won distinction in all camp activities and broke several camp athletic records while attending Camp Terra Alta, private quarters for boys at Terra Alta Lake, Terra Alta, W. Va., this summer. Perry, with Eugene Fies, also of this city, was selected by E. H. Shade, South State st., one of the ten counselors in charge of the camp, to accompany him to the camp for the eight week summer term this year.

The camp is divided into two units, the junior unit for boys from 9 to 14 years of age and the senior unit for boys from 15 to 18 years. The units are divided into two groups each and Perry captained one group throughout the summer. His group vied with the other, and won honors in every camp event, which includes baseball, mushball, tennis, golf, riding, swimming, in fact, every sport prominent in athletic circles.

Makes Record Jump

Perry broke the camp running broad jump record with a jump of 20 feet, 6½ inches. He was awarded the gold medal as being the best all round camper there during the summer.

Additional value is given these awards when it is considered that the records and achievements are made in competition with boys from the best colleges and high schools in the United States. The school this summer numbered 50 boys, including six who were sons of prominent Washington, D. C. attorneys and several senators' sons. Boys attended from the best military academies in the country.

In target practice and rifle shooting Perry won the bronze, silver and gold medals for marksmanship. Fies was presented these medals also.

Both boys were presented the little bear medal, the first award of two which lead to a campers medal, the highest honor a camper can get. Swimming and pole taking require merits to be met before these medals are awarded.

Plans for Next Year.

Mr Shade has on taking six Marion boys with him next year, and expects Perry to go with him for his second summer at Camp Terra Alta.

The camp is under the direction of Lt. Col. T. G. Russell, Commandant of Staunton Military academy, and a staff of men from the highest educational institutions in the country.

Sixty per cent of all Protestant church made not a single convert in 1927.

Tape Runs 38 Minutes Behind in Fourth Hour; Motors Lead

OILS, STEELS IN LINE

Little Recognition Given New $96,000,000 Expansion in Brokers' Loans

New York, Sept. 14—With hardly a recognition of the new $96,000,000 expansion in brokers' loans as shown in the reserve board's weekly compilation, industrial stocks forged ahead today under the stimulus of a wave of buying demand which swamped the floor of the exchange and piled up a new high record of transactions for the first three-hour period.

Of more importance than the brokers' loan report was the fact that the money market has been developing an easier tone, with call funds available at seven per cent or below and a much more favorable reception accorded to the new issues of investment bonds now being brought to market. With the completion of the treasury department and corporation mid-September financing, and the actual resumption of gold imports from London under way, there was a strong feeling in the financial district that the worst has been seen in the pinch of the money market, and for that reason a seven per cent call loan rate or better seems assured for the rest of the year.

With the stock tape running 38 minutes behind in the fourth hour, the market boiled and seethed under the strain of an extremely heavy load of speculative trading. The motor stocks led the procession in the forenoon, but the oils and independent steels stepped promptly into line, the former owing its brisk forward movement to the strengthening of the crude oil markets, with a new advance of 15 cents a barrel. It was also reported that President Walter Teagle of the Standard of New Jersey, in his European conferences had secured important concessions in his program of world conservation of oil supplies. Mariand, Texas Corp. and Midcontinent led the move in the oils.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

Continued slump in the sale of bananas has been noted on the local produce markets the last few days, concurrent with an advance in price here.

Only a small supply of bananas was found in a saleable condition on the fruit stands today Most of the supply in the city was green and was placed in storage for ripening. Lack of ripe bananas caused advance of the fruit to 10 cents a pound today while most dealers were asking 25 cents for three and four pounds the first of the week.

Wholesale dealers report they are unable to obtain a sufficient supply of bananas for the city because of the scarcity in eastern markets Additional advances in price is expected to take place here unless the situation is relieved with a greater supply.

Peaches continued to be sold at many prices in the city fruit houses today. A gradual increase in the supply this week brought the price for the best grade of the fruit down to $2.50 a bushel today, 25 cents lower than dealers were asking yesterday.

The poorest grade of peaches being sold here remained marked at $1 a bushel in some of the markets. Other prices found here today were $1.19 $1.50 and $2.25 a bushel

The best grade of home grown potatoes was selling at $1.15 a bushel and 30 cents a peck in the majority of the vegetable stands. A few of the low priced stands quoted potatoes at 25 cents a peck and $1 a bushel Large sales were reported from both grades all over the city.

TODAY'S REVIEW OF YESTERDAY'S MARKET

Chicago, Sept 14 — A close that looked miserably weak after the decaying strength early in the session marked the finish of the grain markets yesterday Even the highly artificial September corn that shot up to a skyrocket high of 1.01½ sagged away to a final quotation of 99⅝ "sellers"

At the end wheat was 1½@1⅝c lower, corn was unchanged to 1⅜c higher, oats were unchanged to ½c higher, rye was ½c lower to ⅝c higher.

There was heavy short covering and enthusiastic bull buying of all the futures during the day Wheat advanced 1½c from the opening price, but then it quit cold

It lost all its net gain over the previous closing and a little more The market gave the impression that the bull fever is too ephemeral to get anywhere against the persistently bearish tidings.

Jardine Gives Advice

Secretary of Agriculture Jardine was quoted as saying there is no sound reason for depressed wheat prices abroad in view of a production of wheat on the North American continent that will approximate 1,800,000,000 bu. This will supply a surplus almost large enough—if not quite—to provide the entire import needs of the whole world.

On top of this the dollar today is said by economists to be back around par. That is, to have a value of about 100 cents, far above its value in war days. Assuming this to be correct the price of wheat now is not comparable to its wartime price, but is comparable to its pre-war price when the dollar was worth 100 cents.

With abundant crops wheat is not necessarily, therefore, selling at a very cheap price at present.

Corn Market Topsy

The corn market wound up with a close as disappointing as the close in wheat. Aside from the September future the market could not hold its ledges. Receipts were also advancing 1½ above the closing level of Thursday many cents back to the first of the week.

Start Probe of Phone Calls From Jockey's Room to Baseball Me

REPORTED SENT TO M'GRAW AND HORNSBY

Landis and Peabody Both Interested In Bills Sent to Allen

SEEK ANY VIOLATIONS

Rules Forbid Diamond Managers To Play Races or Jockeys To Give Out Data

Chicago, Sept. 14—A double headed investigation was started today as a result of a telephone bill sent to Jockey C. E. Allen, veteran rider at the Chicago race tracks, for $559.07, by the Illinois Telephone Co for local and long distance calls during June and July from a fashionable apartment hotel.

The telephone company sent the bill to Jockey Allen stating that some of the long distance calls were to John McGraw, of the New York Giants and Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Boston National league club.

The matter is interesting to both Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of baseball, and Stuyvesant Peabody, president of the Illinois Turf association.

The baseball commissioner wants to know if McGraw and Hornsby have been betting on the races, because the heads of both National and American leagues in a conference last winter wrote a section into baseball law prohibiting players and managers from betting on the races.

That was at French Lick, while baseball was investigating reports of "thrown games" because various players had become financially involved and sought to recoup through race track betting.

If McGraw and Hornsby have been violating the rule, it was intimated there may be serious charges brought against them, with a possibility of them being barred from league participation, by the commission.

And, on the turf, one of the strictest rules is that prohibiting jockeys from disseminating race track information.

McGraw and Hornsby were not reached yesterday for their version of the telephone calls. That Judge Landis said, would be done today.

Jockey Allen lastly denied however that the bill was his, and with equal positiveness refuses to pay it.

The apartment where the calls were placed, records at the hotel show, was occupied during June and July by a young couple who registered as "C. Allen and wife." Attendes of the hotel looked at pictures of Jockey Allen and stated positively that he was not the occupant of the apartment.

"I am not married, never lived at that hotel and I have sent out no information about the races at any time," said Allen. "I know nothing about the bill and certainly will not pay it."

PLAN FIVE STORIES FOR THEW BUILDING

Arrangements Made To Add Two Floors Later ; Change Delays Steel Deliveries

The new building being erected on West Center st by J. W. Thew, local realtor, for the Montgomery Ward Co., will eventually be a five story structure instead of three stories, as originally planned, according to an announcement made today by Mr Thew.

As a result of this change in plans, construction work has been temporarily delayed awaiting delivery of steel, which is to be furnished by the Ralston Steel Car Co, of Columbus.

The first shipment of steel is expected in about a week, following which the structural work will get under way. John Moore, local architect in charge of the work, was in Columbus yesterday and arranged for deliveries from the Ralston Co. at the earliest possible date.

More than 70 tons of steel will be required for the entire building, the architect states. The basement and foundation are now complete. It is expected that the building will be finished and ready for occupancy about Dec. 1.

Arrangements for planning the structure for five stories were made following a visit here of representatives of the Montgomery Ward Co., Mr Thew says. The additional two stories will not be built for several years, according to present plans.

HOOVER PLANS MEET WITH CURTIS, WORK

Republican "Big Three" To Consider New Campaign Proposals

Washington, Sept. 14 - Herbert Hoover, the Republican nominee, today arranged to meet Senator Charles Curtis, his running mate, and Dr. Hubert Work, the Republican national chairman, for a conference on Republican campaign strategy.

The Republican "big three" planned to consider new campaign plans and there was a possibility that other prominent party leaders would be called into the conference. Curtis, just returned from a speaking tour of New England, was to give Hoover and Work his impressions on the situation "down east" and to suggest the steps necessary to win those normally Republican states in November.

The Republican vice presidential nominee long has been considered one of the shrewdest political leaders in Washington. His advice constantly has been sought in previous presidential campaigns and his views as to the requirements for winning New England undoubtedly will be followed.

One step already taken to speed up Republican organization work along the Atlantic seaboard was the promotion of Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire to a new post, where he becomes advisory manager of the campaign in the east. Moses will pass upon all new political maneuvers in the east and his promotion was made by Hoover personally, it was said, in order to get a practical politician in charge of the eastern campaign.

ANNOUNCE PROGRAM FOR MEETING HERE

State Officers To Deliver Principal Addresses at Chamber of Commerce Dinner

Frank B. McMillin, president of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce and its national councilor in the United States Chamber, and George B. Chandler, executive secretary of the Ohio Chamber, are booked as the principal speakers at a dinner meeting to be held at Hotel Harding, Thursday, Sept. 20.

Local business men have been invited to attend the meeting, set to start at 6:30 o'clock. Invitations have been sent out by S. P. Bush, of Columbus, vice president of the central Ohio district.

This is one of a number of meetings being held throughout the state under direction of the officers and directors of the Ohio State Chamber of Commerce. The purpose is to stimulate interest in the organization's activities and purposes by outlining its program, which includes important surveys and other projects reported to be of material interest to Marion and all other communities of the state.

The subject of Mr. McMillin's address will be "A Call to the Colors." Under this topic he will present some of the business problems of the day and the need of cooperation on the part of business men. Mr. Chandler will discuss the immediate program of the state Chamber and also give advance information about its plans for proposals to be presented at the next session of the general assembly of Ohio. These proposals will relate to important economic problems confronting business in Ohio at the present time, according to the announcement.

MR. G. W. LANDIS

"I really did not think I would ever be relieved of my troubles but Konjola surely acted as a Godsend in my case and I will always recommend it," said Mr. G. W. Landis, 327 Madison Avenue, Akron, Ohio.

"The awful pains of neuritis settled in my arms and shoulders and were so bad I could scarcely raise my hands above my head. For ten years this had been my condition and nothing ever gave me the least relief. I was also constipated and this certainly added to my suffering and my entire inner-system was filled with poisons.

"But a treatment of Konjola banished every one of these ailments and now I am feeling like a different person. This medicine has driven the neuritis from my body and I can use my arms just as I did before that ailment came over me. The constipation is ended and I have free bowel movement every day. Konjola is a splendid medicine."

Konjola is different from any other remedy in this section. It contains twenty-two juices extracted from natural plants which invigorate the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels to more healthy action. NON-STOP AIR DERBY CALLED 'NO CONTEST'

Art Goebel Lands His Plane at Goal, but Announces Previous Landing

Los Angeles, Sept. 14—The non-stop section of the national air races was today without a winner the officials having declared it "no contest."

This decision was given out after it was learned that no one of the nine fliers who took off from New York late Wednesday was able to make Los Angeles without a stop.

Art Goebel, winner of the Hawaiian Dole race and a favorite in the national non-stop derby, landed his Lockheed-Vega monoplane at Mines field here at 3:20 o'clock yesterday afternoon and at first it was believed he had won the race.

Just as the crowd was loosing its plaudits for the "home town" boy, Goebel himself nipped the budding celebration by calmly announcing that he had been forced down at Prescott, Arizona. Thus, practically within hailing distance of his goal, Goebel became disqualified.

He was the only one of the nine starters to reach the finish line. George Haldeman of Detroit came nearest of the other eight, managing to get his Bellanca plane as far as Albuquerque, N. M., according to reports reaching here. He was forced down by a storm and shortage of fuel.

Of the seven other planes that hopped from New York Wednesday, one has been demolished in a crash, severely injuring two occupants, and the six others had been been forced down by various causes.

$1,000,000 DAMAGE IN TROPICAL STORM

Terriffic Wind, with Velocity of 150 Miles an Hour, Sweeps Over San Juan

San Juan, Porto Rico, Sept. 14—All relief agencies in this city today were cooperating in a concerted effort to bring the city back to normal and check up on the damage wrought by the worst tropical storm in its history.

For four hours a terrific wind which at times reached a velocity of almost 150 miles an hour tore asunder everything in its path. The wind came from the southeast and swept northwest towards Cuba and the Florida coast.

Damage estimates ranged from $1,000,000 up. Police today beat all their efforts to ascertaining if there were any casualties. Shipping in the harbor was believed to have suffered heavily.

Grave fears were held today for several ships believed to be in the path of the cyclonic storm. The steamer San Lorenzo left San Juan a few hours before the storm started bound northward for New York.

Capt. Franz Romer, who crossed the ocean alone in a collapsible canoe, left San Juan Tuesday bound for Florida in his frail craft.

SAY KIDNAPED BOY WILL BE RETURNED

Police Captain Says Father of Child Dealing with Gang

Chicago, Sept. 14. Billy Ranieri, 10 year old victim of kidnapers, is alive and well and, probably will be delivered at his parents' home today.

This was the message brought back by Police Capt. James Dougherty after an early morning conference with Frank R. Ranieri, the boy's father. Dougherty went to the Ranieri home last midnight and was closeted with the father for several hours.

"I am convinced the father of the stolen youth is dealing directly with the kidnapers," Captain Dougherty said. "I also believe he expects the boy home today as the result of these negotiations.

"When I asked him for a picture of the boy at midnight, he smiled and said you can have one in the morning when he gets home."

The boy was kidnaped eight days ago and is being held for $[illegible] ransom. Despite the father's plea that he is unable to raise the money, the kidnapers have notified him that unless it is "on delivery" by Saturday tomorrow the boy would be tortured to death.

A big tri-motor Ford airplane is to try out Marion's big airport next week. Let us hope that somebody will tie up that mule

There must be something in the printed report that Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler, who starred in "Lucky," are to marry. Neither will admit it.

A Chicago wire says the grand jury up there has evidence linking the city's gangsters with its officials. Huh! We have long understood that that was not only recognized, but also admitted.

"New Revolt Plot Uncovered in Southern Portugal," reads a headline, from which we glean that Portugal is again getting back to normal.

The mayor of Philadelphia wants the Rev. Billy Sunday to "save" that city. The Rev. Billy is recognized as a great revivalist, but he does not claim to be a worker of miracles.

Senator Tom Heflin is indignant that Governor Fuller, of Massachusetts, made a statement tying him up with the Rev. John Roach Straton. The least that Governor Fuller can do is to apologize to both.

Secretary Wilbur certainly could not have read the recent church resolution advocating a reduction of the army and navy budgets. Here he's demanding an adequate navy, "pact or no pact." Hasn't he any appreciation whatever of the tender feelings of the pacificists, the parlor pinks, the communists and other foes of government?

It may have been good politics for Governor Smith to break into print with proof of the falsity of a story that he was intoxicated while attending the New York state fair in Syracuse, but there was no occasion for him to do so. Any one with a minimum of brains knows that no candidate of a great party for the presidency would ever even so much as think of drinking upon such an occasion. The two old parties do not nominate drunkards for the highest office in the land.

Blind to Gun-Toting.

Stories of the funeral of Antonio Lombardo wired out from Chicago told of a magnificent silver and bronze casket over which two silk flags were draped, one an American and the other an Italian; of seventeen truckloads of floral offerings estimated to have cost $20,000; of twelve pall-bearers wearing Tuxedos; of a procession two miles long; of the presence of several hundred policemen and Alphonse Capone, the reputed leader of Chicago gangland; of the placing of the body in a mausoleum because of the refusal of the cardinal to permit burial in consecrated ground, but none of them coming to our notice carried a little detail of which not a little was made in the Chicago papers. None of them had anything to say of the bulging pockets of the bodyguard of Capone and others who went about with hands on guns in their pockets, prepared for trouble.

If the Chicago reporters were able to note this little detail, one is bound to wonder how it escaped the attention of the hundreds of policemen on duty at the funeral and along the line followed by the funeral cortege. Could the Chicago reporters have imagined this detail, or were the Chicago police simply blind to it?

As head of the Italo-American National Union, which has a membership of 15,000, Lombardo was an important figure among Chicago representatives of his blood. It is no more than natural that their floral offerings were gorgeous. The Latins are given to extraordinary display at such times. The fact that Lombardo was slain as he was no doubt called out hundreds upon hundreds to swell the funeral procession and show their friendship for the murdered man. There is no legal bar against the air of pomp to which their offerings and their presence at the funeral contributed, but if the criminal world so numerously represented at the funeral was permitted to go armed to the teeth, to use an old saying, it constituted a violation of the law. No matter what the occasion, a criminal has no more right to bear arms than a law-abidnig citizen. If the reports in the Chicago papers are accurate concerning the presence of armed men at the funeral, the police were derelict in their duty in not arresting them.

There can be little chance that Chicago can break away from gangster control; there can be little chance of driving out gangsters and ending the era of violence which for years has obtained in that city, so long as the police authorities permit criminals to go armed about the city's streets.

The first move in rescuing Chciago from its criminal element and restoring law and order should be the disarming of her bandits, gangsters, rum-runners and bootleggers, and this will never be accomplished so long as the city's police authorities shut their eyes to gun-toting by her criminal world.

The Two-Party System.

This being a presidential year, it is not strange one hears "We should not be trammeled by the traditions and conventions of an earlier age."

It may not be an occasion for amazement that one hears street corner political scientists asking: "Why not vote for the best man, whoever he is, and wherever he is, and no matter on what ticket or platform he is running, without any consideration of party?"

The party system of government has had so many disturbing disadvantages from its inception that a little sober reflection should convince any serious-minded person that it never would have prevailed for so long except for large and substantial advantages.

Party differences are fraught with many evils. They make for ill-feeling between families and friends and neighbors. They make political action proceed too often from mere prejudices instead of from a free recognition of immediate and vital needs. Too often, they create vast corrupt organizations ruled by unscrupulous politicians for their own personal purposes rather than for the common weal.

But what happens in the absence of the two-party system?

In the Latin countries, as well as in Germany, instead of two parties, there may be a dozen. Strictly speaking, they are not parties at all, but only blocs; center, right, left, right-center, socialists, communists, monarchists, etc.

In such a tangle concerted action is impossible, except by resort to flimsy and ephemeral compromise. A great leader never can rely upon a working majority. His best energies have to be devoted to wheedling, purchasing, contriving, conspiring or intimidating.

The result? Italy supplies the answer. Before the coming of Mussolini, whose fascism is admittedly repugnant to all the idealists who are ambitious for the continued progress of civilization, the hopeless chaos and confusion of a multiplicity of party groups ended in an utterly absolute domination of a dictator and the disappearance of popular rule.

Against that record, consider the cases of Great Britain and the United States. In England, for two centuries, a strong two-party system, with all its disadvantages, has given British parliamentary system as a fair working model.

And the Anglo-Saxon instinct, which has resisted every attempt to break up parties into blocs and has insisted upon two great organizations, each jealously watching the other, has asserted itself in the United States. Early in the history of the American government, two American parties shaped themselves, generally speaking, along the same lines as those of England, and they have persisted unto the present hour through every imaginable vicissitude.

It is necessary, of course, to acknowledge that the safety-valve of the two-party system lies in the group of independent voters—the small, shifting balance-of-power minority, willing to change its alignments whenever either party is found guilty of injustice, of tyranny, or of any practice out of harmony with the fundamentals of essentially American standards of government.

A huge bridge is being planned to connect the two peninsulas of Michigan. It's simply amazing how many bridges heading toward Canada have been constructed or planned since this country went dry.

Yesterday's despatches told us about the fond farewell of the twenty-eight wives of a Chinese general as he was about to go into battle and the burial of a native chief in Africa who was mourned by 20c of his widows. Every once in a while heroes previously unknown are brought to the world's attention.

A writer cites the old proverb to the effect that "a library is a repository of medicine for the mind." Seems to us that much would depend on its age. If made up of recent stuff, it would come pretty near wrecking mind as well as morals.

Mr. Raskob is reported as expressing surprise at the "small margin" by which Maine went Republican. Some good friend should whisper into Mr. Raskob's ear that he not only is talking too much, but also talking, "an infinite deal of nonsense."

A New Yorker was fined $60 for mutilating a newspaper file in the Library of Congress by cutting an article out of it, despite his claim that he meant no harm, in which he may have been perfectly honest. The stupidity of the hick town of the land is simply amazing

Mabel Boll accuses Bert Acosta and Bernard Wickham of having wrecked what she refers to as her plane because they were afraid to cross the Atlantic, and Acosta says that Mabel jinxed the flight; that she and Levine "have been barred from every airport in Europe." And thus the propo ed transatlantic flight ends in recriminations instead of the customary ocean.

Over 300 out of every 1,000 of the red mine workers in soviet Russia were victims of accidents last year, due to the fact, principally, that the higher-ups misappropriated the larger part of the $2,750,000 appropriated for mine safeguards, and the mine accident record so far this year is higher than that of last. What do the aristocrats of bolshevism care for those who slave for them? Not a thing! "Liberty and Equality!"

The twenty-year-old Cunarder, Mauretania, has established three new records within the last ninety days. Having made the Southampton-New York-Plymouth trip in twelve days and fifteen hours early in July, later in the same month she sailed from New York to Cherbourg in five days, three hours and seventeen minutes and this month sailed from New York to Plymouth in five days and six minutes, her official time from New York to Eddystone light being four days, twenty-three hours and ten minutes. The Mauretania must be recognized as the speed freak of the sea.

STRAIGHT THROUGH!

Heart Requires Nourishment.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

For several days I have been preaching the importance of possessing a good heart. At the same time I have told you that most hearts are good if they are cared for as they should be.

What sort of care should this be?

In the first place the heart muscles should be well nourished. What the heart can do and will do, depends on the condition of the mass of muscles making up its structure. The heart does its work by action of these muscles and they can not act properly unless they are adequately fed, regularly exercised and guarded against poisoning.

The food we eat is of no use unless it is prepared by the blood. The blood can not do its work without a strong heart to send it through the body. It can not do this unless, in turn, the heart itself is well fed and properly nourished. So, you see, you must eat the right kind of food and in the right quantities, or your heart will go on strike. As I have said before, you may regard your heart as a hired man, but he won't work if he isn't fed.

In this day, when the fad for getting thin is the most important thing in certain lives, there is sometimes actual starvation of the heart muscles. It is a serious mistake to indulge any practice that may harm a vital organ. If for any reason there is underfeeding, the heart is sure to suffer.

The chief need in the repair and upbuilding of muscular tissue is protein food. Of this, good examples are lean meat, milk, cheese, the cereals and eggs. There must be regular intake of such foods or the heart will grow weak.

You can not expect to have a good heart unless your manner of living is such that all your muscles are kept in trim by proper exercise, fresh air, abundance of rest and sleep and contentment of mind. The heart is a part of the body; it shares all the benefits, as well as all the disadvantages experienced by the body.

In short, all these things that make for general good health, will make for good heart health. I have said on other occasions that it is like "taking care of the pennies and the dollars will take care of themselves." If you take care of the simple things of life, the larger and more important things will take care of themselves.

Malaria, chronic sores, a running ear, bad teeth and tonsils, gall bladder disease, chronic indigestion, constipation and some mineral poisons have a way of undermining the heart's welfare. The lack of iron in the food is another factor of importance.

It is much easier to avoid having trouble with the heart than it is to overcome it. But even though your heart has become weakened, you must not feel the condition is hopeless. It isn't by any means.

If you think your heart is out of order, go talk with your doctor. Nine times out of ten, he may honestly laugh at your fears, but it will do you a world of good to know there is nothing wrong.

Tomorrow, "The Athletic Heart."

Editorial Mention.

A LENIENT SENTENCE.

A flood of amazed indignation has been occasioned by the remarkable sentence imposed upon the once-celebrated feminist, Mrs. Florence Knapp, who as secretary of state of New York was accused of stealing and converting to her own use the sum of $30,000, tried and convicted of the offense.

Mrs. Knapp had been a leader in the higher education of women. She was highly honored by the electors of her state. She betrayed her trust and stole from the taxpayers of New York the sum of money indicated. For this superior larceny she was sentenced to serve thirty days in jail—for every thousand dollars she purloined she must spend one day in a common jail; as a matter of fact, as a member of a sheriff's family!

And yet there is wonder expressed over the fact that people increasingly are failing in their respect for the law and its processes!

This sentence palpably is a perversion of judicial sanction, a sentence which defeats every end and purpose of exact justice and outrages and insults the unfortunate taxpaying public of the state this lady was convicted of having plundered.

Had a man committed the crime of which this woman was accused, and for which she was convicted, he would, most probably, have received the limit of the law for his offense.

The court should extend to the lady a vote of thanks for having had the privilege to try her. The lady might reciprocate by expressing her gratitude for the chivalry, leniency and foolishness of the court.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

MERELY IMPERSONAL.

Startling intelligence from the windy confines of the big village on the drainage ditch. "Big Bill" Thompson never had any personal hatred of the king of England and head of the British empire. We have it on the authority of one of the big mayor's trusted spokesmen. Recent chapters of history must now be rewritten.

George, you remember, has been the big issue in Chicago politics ever since the inexplicable resurrection of Bill, the mayor. Because George by indirect and underhanded methods sought to poison the minds of Chicago school pupils, the mayor inaugurated that most astounding piece of claptrap which led finally to the dismissal of Superintendent McAndrew. Because Canada, an up and coming branch of George's vast realm, protested against Chicago's continued theft of the waters of her lake and ours, Bill ranted and splurged and fought Yorktown all over again.

But this, it seems, was all impersonal. The king was merely a symbol, we are told. Bill would not have touched a hair in George's well-kept beard, would not have robbed him of a moment's sweet repose or given him cause for the slightest worry, even if he could. This all but unbelievable truth comes from the Hon. William Wall, assistant corporation counsel, whose declaration of amity had not been repudiated at press time.

This relieves a tense situation. We disliked having the head of the world's greatest empire go about his daily tasks with heart saddened by thoughts of the Chicago mayor's devastating hatred of him and all his works. How could peace come to a war-weary world as long as a leader of civilization like Bill continued to adorn his ample form in war paint and a few feathers!

It's all over now. Impersonal hatreds shed no blood. Peace again along the sewage route.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

"I want to take the name of an illustrious American," said Theodore Djiadulewicz, an applicant for final citizenship papers.

"Whose name do you wish to adopt?" asked Judge Tuttle.

"That of former United States Senator Theodore Burton, of Ohio."

The judge acquiesced; and then the man who had entered the court room as Theodore Djiadulewicz, a petitioner for naturalization, went out of it Theodore Burton, an American citizen.

Occasionally a prophet appears who is not without honor even in his own country. At the recent Ohio primaries, Congressman Theodore E. Burton was accorded the Republican nomination for the senate by an overwhelming plurality. This was a fitting recognition of a long life of splendid public service; but was it a greater compliment to the man that the desire of a newcomer to this country to make the name of Congressman Burton his own? What greater good can a statesman do than to so live that his light will shine before men as the personification of the ideals of his country? Theodore Burton the Second has chosen a high mark for himself and his progeny to shoot at.—Detroit Free Press.

The Moon World.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

Sitting one late twilight of an exquisitely clear summer evening in a tree-shaded garden on the shore of the little river, Tuie, in vineland Burgundy, we ceased talking in order to admire in unarmed silence the extreme beauty of the moon. She was then at her first quarter, and shining in the southern heavens with a silvery splendor that was enhanced by the deep azure blue of the sky, from which the last faint hint of the sunken sun were fast withdrawing.

We had been speaking of Jules Verne, and most appropriately the moon came into view to recall the story of his imaginary adventurers who tried to visit that mysterious world in a huge hollow projectile. Then we spoke of the recent discussion in France of the possibility of men actually going to the moon, not shot out of a giant cannon as the great writer of cosmic romances imagined, but carried up, though swiftly, yet gently, by a multi-charge rocket.

Presently one of the little party inquired about the size of the moon, as compared with the earth. He was told that the moon's diameter is 2,160 miles, that of the earth being 7,920 miles.

"Then that straight line that we see there bordering the eastern side of the half moon must be over 2,000 miles long," he exclaimed. "But how short it looks to us here."

"Yes, it does look surprisingly short for its 2,000-mile length, but you should remember its distance. The moon is about 2,000 miles from the earth, or say 235,000 miles from the place where we sit on the earth's surface, and that is about 109 times the moon's diameter. But that line which looks so straight is really a curve, a half-circle, belting the moon and swelling out toward us, so that is actually runs over 3,392 miles of the lunar surface. It is half of a hemisphere of the moon that we see there flattened against the sky. It includes an area of the lunar surface amounting to about 3,695,000 square miles—yet, as it hangs shining on high you can hide it all behind the end of a pencil. You are looking at an area greater than the whole of the United States, yet it covers only that tiny patch on the sky.

"Part of it, of course, you see at a very low angle, just as you do the edge of a globe sloping away from your eye, but the central part is presented squarely to your line of sight."

"What is there, anyway, up there on the moon?" suddenly asked one of the party. "Suppose we could get there, would we find anything worth while?"

"You might find diamonds! The moon appears full of ancient volcanic necks, and you will remember that it was a volcanic neck long ago cooled off which made the dazzling fortune of South Africa. On the moon there are some peak-rimed craters that gleam in the telescope like jewels of fire. Some think they may be full of brilliant minerals whose facets reflect the sunshine. What a fortune for the first astronaut who reaches the moon and is able to return in his rocket laden with the treasures of that spherical island in the sky! But one who goes to the moon must carry his atmosphere with him. He will find nothing to breathe there.

"Chemistry will take care of that," said another, "and of the food problem, too, for I suppose there is nothing good to eat growing on the moon."

"I don't know about that. There are suspicious appearances in certain places on the moon which some persons take to be indications of the existence of vegetation. Careful study shows a great variety of faint colorations in the lunar landscapes, which some amateur astronomer might take up for study and immortalize himself."—Copyright, 1928, International Feature Service, Inc.

At Santa Monica.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

Santa Monica, Sept. 14—Santa Monica is [illegible] hours drive from Los Angeles and is usually the stranger to southern California's first view of the Pacific's pounding surf. Santa Monica runs along the shore, which is terraced and plotted off into beautiful gardens.

It is a town where pedestrians rule the highways. They do not wait for traffic signs in crossing the streets. Traffic stops for them. Whether a law or custom I do not know. But all motorists "ducement"—a word in the French—passing through town.

Along the ocean front is a most pronounced beach life and open air living. There are miles upon miles of tiny bird-nest-like bungalows where middle-class folk live through the season in bathing clothes and acquire the bronze of Indians.

At night shores are dotted with camp fires where dinners are cooked and spread on sand. The little bungalows on stilts are painted in a variety of vivid colors and bear such romantic names as "White Rose Villa," "Journey's End" "Heaven-on-Earth" and such.

On one side of the roadway are the amusement and towering palisades and on the other the beach front and ocean. Endless hot-dog and soft-drink stands ballyhoo their indigestible wares. The little bungalows may be had for as low as $300, and thus even the humble laborer has his "country home."

Not all the homes, however, are of this variety. Some are castles resembling those on the Hudson. And there are other communities where the cost of the home is restricted to $2,500. In this way there is no extravagant contest for residential grandeur.

Many movie folk reside along the water shore when not "on location." Among those I saw in front of their bungalows were Clara Bow, Richard Dix and Allan Dwan. Miss Bow, incidentally, was perched atop a pier with her wild orange frizzed hair askew in the breeze—just as she has been so often photographed.

On the top pinnacle of what are known as the Pacific Palisades is the new home of Arthur Bernheimer, a retired millionaire Chinese importer. Mr Bernheimer built one house in Hollywood which is now a museum. His new home will require ten years to complete. It is in its third year, and the architecture is, like his other, is Chinese. All day long he [illegible] intends a huge force of workmen will be transforming a bleak and barren peak into a scene of exotic loveliness. He permits me to view his grounds and all day there is a steady stream of them.

Psychologists tell us babies are much smarter than we think. Or, if they are not consciously smart they are recording impressions, almost from birth. Children see things and hear things when they are so [illegible] ly too young to understand, and the impressions last all through life. Behavior is [illegible] and life definitely changed for many a man by something that happened to him in the first few years he thinks he has forgotten.

When children are a little older they know more than we suspect and more than we wish they did. Lying to children is even worse than lying to grown-ups. Grown-ups forget it and are little impressed. Children are shocked and then changed by a lie.

One of the secretaries of the Y. M. C. A. in Shanghai, China, says all China asks is that the rest of the world is a little patience. China will right her affairs, take care of herself and become a great power friendly to the rest of the nations. It took France a hundred years after the revolution really to put her house in order. In the meantime she tried more than a dozen forms of government. Everything can now be expected of China in ten or fifteen years.

For one thing and another the world has a great deal of patience.

Now she is working on a second novel and perhaps she has arrived at a great truth when she discovers that home is a good place to work, to produce. It's rather discouraging that so many bad habits should be so old. One would think we would have outgrown many things. Some are almost as old as history and which have no signs of outgrowing. It is said dancing was so popular in India centuries ago that two kings, who had unpronounceable names, staked and lost their kingdoms on the throw of dice cubes.

As far back as history goes there seems to be too much of something or other of which there is still too much.

All of which calls for a sense of humor and much patience.

-o- The New Book -o-

By FRANCES JENNINGS

The end of doubt that fall is the best season for book lovers" is true. New books—novels—biography, philosophy—poetry—coming from the presses of outstanding publishers at the present time.

Books for adults, for children, for the cultivated, for the simple—readers of all kinds to satiate the reading appetite in literature are found in bookstore windows and among the popular shelves of the public libraries.

Of the most eagerly awaited books is a new book by Louis Bromfield, which has just appeared under the title "The Strange Case of Annie Bromfield, a native of Mansfield, achieved popularity with "A Good Woman," "Early Autumn," "Possession" and "The Green Bay Tree." The new book is said to be a "gentle probing into the twin mysteries of love and religion."

Other Favorites

Three other popular novelists appearing on the fall book lists are Anne Parrish, with "All Kneeling," the devastating story of a woman who had all the world kneeling at her feet; "Destiny Bay," by the late Donn Byrne, the author of "Brother Saul" and "Crusade," and Elsie Singmaster, whose new book is called, "What Everybody Wanted."

P. C. Wren reappears on the book lists with a new story of romantic adventure, "Beau Ideal," Carl Van Vechten with "Spider Boy," which concerns Hollywood; and J. P. McEvoy with "Show Girl," which tells of Broadway.

Worthy of mention are the new novels of Edith Wharton and Storm Jameson. The new novel of the former deals with the problem of divorce and is fittingly entitled, "The Children." Miss Jameson's new book, "Farewell to Youth," is her seventh publication, a not unworthy successor to "The Lovely Ship," "Three Kingdoms," "The Pitiful Wife," "The Clash," "The Happy Highways" and "The Pot Boils."

Story of Family Feud

From England also comes a new novel by Ruth Manning-Sanders, who although introduced several years ago, has never been widely read. Her new book, the chronicle of a family feud, promises to place her on best-selling lists. The title is "Waste Corner."

Titles of other new books, selected at random, are "Many Waters," by the author of "The Price of Wisdom," Marjorie Barkley; "Scarlet Heels," the second novel of Edith M. Stern, author of "Purse Strings"; "Two Black Crows in the A. E. F.," by Charles E. Mack of Moran and Mack fame; "Money of Her Own," by Margaret Culkin Banning; "This Side Idolatry," a novel based on the life of Charles Dickens, by C. E. Bechofer Roberts; and "The Bishop's Wife," Robert Nathan's triangle story with a bishop, an archdeacon and the bishop's lovely wife as the principal characters.

TURNBULL STORY HAS HAPPY ENDING

As the title would indicate, "The Handsome Man," by Margaret Turnbull, is a semi-thriller more adapted to the movies than to fiction. It is the story of the British nobleman of depleted fortune and rundown estate seeking fresher fields for recouping them in America—and of course finding them in the person of the beautiful daughter of his employer.

Through three hundred and sixty pages Sir George and Roberta hate each other with a venemous hate, but in case of any doubt they fall conveniently into each other's arms on the last page and are married at once by a most convenient minister and license. There is even a suggestion that they lived happily ever after.

BERCOVICI'S BOOK FRUIT OF LIFETIME

Konrad Bercovici's new book, "Alexander," a romantic biography, is the fruit of a lifetime, based on grotesque legend and romantic fact.

Alexander's father was the hard-headed general, Philip of Macedon, and his mother is described as a throwback to the prehistoric cult of serpent worshippers—a red-headed beauty with a tiger-like disposition.

Alexander himself leaves home as a young man with a whole army back of him, and starts for home 10 years later, his army dead under him and himself in fact a Persian emperor.

Konrad Bercovici was born and reared among Roumanian legends of Alexander the Great. His father was an Alexander fan. Later, when he traveled through Greece, Turkey, Palestine, Egypt and Persia, he heard the grotesquely varied versions of the conqueror. Bercovici, speaking eight languages and understanding many dialects, heard these unwritten legends in their original flavor. Then Bercovici the scholar, gave way to Bercovici the author, whose works are classics in many languages.

Beauty and the Million

DRAMATIC STORY OF AMAZING ADVENTURE

BY WILLIAM ALMON WOLFF

THE STORY SO FAR

Jim Henshaw, after several years in the far west, arrives in New York in old clothes, but with plenty of money. He registers at a fashionable hotel, buys expensive suits and goes to the theatre. By accident he sits next to Irene Delmar, beautiful heiress of New York. In discussing the theatre she loses track of time. Her father and mother—and Jim come to her rescue.

He introduces himself, learns who she is, tells her he is going to work and will have 50 or 60 thousand a year. Irene asks him to tell her about his experience in the west.

He explains that his uncle refused to send him to college and insisted upon his working in his uncle's factory, which he quit in disgust. Learning that he is to meet Century the next day she asks him to call on her family in her private car.

At the Grand Central, Jim meets Ralph Blake, who, he learns, is engaged to Irene. He accepts an invitation to dine with the Delmars that evening.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER FIVE

ENGAGED! Engaged to be married! To Ralph Blake! Irene—to that loud-mouthed brute.

It was all he could think of—he, Jim Henshaw, who, 48 hours before, hadn't known there was a girl called Irene Delmar in the world!

He knew, now, the source of the depression that had held him in its grip as the train neared New York. His sixth sense had warned him; he had had a premonition of disaster. And this was disaster—this discovery that Irene was engaged, that she was definitely removed as a possible object of his own love.

But she wasn't— she couldn't be. Whether he ought to love her or not he knew he had, he knew, from the moment in which he had first seen her. He didn't know whether he'd ever believed in love at first sight before or not; he did now, in his own case. He couldn't go, he didn't want to go, behind the face—and that was stark, certain, not to be escaped.

If she were engaged to Blake, in love with Blake, pledged to Blake, he ought never to see her again. Friendship with her was not for him; it was not, it could never be, what he wanted. Dine there tonight—to see Blake, perhaps his fellow guest, with his show of proprietorship? Not he! But then he groaned. Never to see her again—to renounce, thus, without a struggle, all the new hopes and dreams that had sprung into being within him since he had met her? It was unthinkable, impossible. Of course he would go.

Engaged? Perhaps she was! But she wasn't married—and while there was life there was hope, wasn't there? Engagements had been broken before—and would be again. Why not this one?

Meanwhile, for all the turmoil of his thoughts, he had things to do. His plans were already made. He had to go to see his uncle's lawyers—his lawyers, now, he supposed. Grant and Shesgren—how well he remembered the name of the old firm! They were in Boston, not in Dortsdale; John Renshaw had not been one to entrust his legal affairs to the management of a country squire.

Jim was going to Boston on the midnight train; he would stay as long as need be. But he had hopes of being back in New York late the next day; he was already beginning to resent the loss of even a day's time—he who had been patient for years!

From the station, now, he went to the Ritz; it would serve until he found quarters of his own. Even before he had talked to Irene he had envisaged his future home. A small apartment, somewhere on the East Side; a Japanese to wait upon him; a car or so, kept at a nearby garage; a horse for the park. He had wondered about clubs; Mr. Delmar, he thought, would help him there—had, indeed, already, in a vague, tentative way, broached the subject.

The day passed pleasantly enough, except for the nagging memory of Blake and his ring. But—she hadn't been wearing the ring. "Ralph thinks he's engaged to me," she had said, too. Oh, he was a fool to worry so—to take this business so seriously, when she, whose principal concern, after all, it was, so plainly didn't take is seriously at all.

New York, when he went abroad in it, after lunch, more than atoned for the poor impression it had made upon him at the first. This was indeed the city of his dreams. Fifth av., with its shops, its constant stream of great motors, its glimpses of beautiful women, enthralled him. He asked no more, for the moment, than to walk along, feasting his eyes upon all that was spread out for them to see, secure in the knowledge that, henceforth, he was to be a part of this great, this magnificent, this altogether unparalleled spectacle.

Never, since time began, had so much of wealth and magnificence been brought together in a single city. Here was the new metropolis of the whole world, its capital—enriched, placed beyond rivalry, by the war. Paris was but a tributary, working to make New York more beautiful; London had become a transatlantic suburb. And as for him, he had come home, after long years of exile.

He went back to his hotel, late in the afternoon, after walking for hours, tired but happy. A warm bath refreshed him; he was loafing, afterward, in one of his new dressing gowns, when his telephone rang. Surprised, he answered, knew a thrill, for a moment, at the thought that it must be Irene, since he knew no one else in the city. But it was not; a reporter, he was told, wanted to see him.

"Send him up!" he said.

So he met, for the first time, Trowbridge, a young man with smiling, grey eyes and a firm, good natured chin.

"Mr. Renshaw?" said Trowbridge. He carried a clipping in his hand; it was, Jim saw, a telegraph paragraph from Chicago.

"I hadn't seen this!" said Jim, with a laugh. "I remember now the Delmars were joking, as we left Chicago yesterday, I suppose some reporter took them seriously."

"Mistakenly?" said Trowbridge. "How about it? Is this piece anywhere near straight? If it is—" He grinned.

"Oh, it's about right, I think," said Jim. "I don't know how much money there is—I hope he's right about that. But his guess is as good as mine. I shan't know for a few days yet—and I don't know that I'll issue any bulletins as to the amount, anyway."

"I suppose we couldn't expect that," said Trowbridge. "But the rest—this stuff about the way you've wandered around—is that straight?"

"Oh, yes—that's all right," Jim looked at him; made one of those shrewd deductions that his life had taught him. "Going to have some fun with me, are you?"

"I was—damn it!" said Trowbridge. "But if you take it that way—please, would you mind threatening to sue the paper for libel and have me beaten up if I make fun of you? Then I could go ahead with a clear conscience—"

"Go as far as you please!" said Jim. "I—er—" He grinned. "I used to be a newspaper man myself—among many other things!"

"I might have guessed it," said Trowbridge. "No—I can't kid you. Sorry. It looked pretty good. I'll write a nice, dull piece about you, and the worst it'll do will be to sue a lot of nuts with something to sell on you. But you're asking for that, of course, anyway."

Jim liked Trowbridge.

"Thanks," he said, "seriously—I can see what a chance there is for you, and I don't mind if you have a little fun with me. It won't do any harm. I—well—I mean—I'm going to Boston tonight, but I'd like you to have lunch with me when I come back. You can tell me a lot about this town, if you will."

"Fair enough," said Trowbridge. "But if you know the Delmars you'll soon know more than I'll ever find out."

"Maybe," said Jim. "But I'd like to see you again, anyway."

"Oh, you will—I'm going to nurse you along for a while. I get paid on space, and you'll be news for a while."

"Call me up day after tomorrow, here," said Jim.

He smiled, well pleased, when he was left alone. He liked this young chap—and it did no harm to have a friend in his position.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

Today was Friday and the last day of vacation; because Saturday is not rightly a vacation day, for we never have school on Saturday. It was about the same kind of weather when I let Jubilee down that it was yesterday and my shortall knees blew around my legs and felt foolish. It made me think of winter the way the wind came around the corner of the house.

When I had put on my short britches and had went down and milked the diamond heifers and turned them out and fed my face, and went out with a couple of pancakes for Jubilee the launch was all there, and Youniss and Maggie and Feeble. I could see that Feeble was trying to say something to me, but Youniss was keeping so close to me that she didn't get a chance all day, though she kept looking crosseyed at me and jerking her head for me to leave the bunch and sneak off with her. But I didn't get a chance.

I thought I was going to get a chance once when we got near the house that has been empty so long just the other side of where the culvert goes through, where the woman lived with a lot of children and her husband got killed in an accident and she had to move away. I told the bunch that we would have a new kind of hide and seek, and Feeble and me would both be "it" and Feeble would have to catch the girls and I would have to catch the boys, and we would blind against the kitchen door, so they all waited and watched us from the road as we were going toward the house, and I put my hand in my pocket and found the egg there that I hadn't used yesterday, and I pulled it out and told Feeble I bet I could hit the door with it, and just as I let go of it a big raggedy man came out of the door and turned part way around to close it so that by the time the egg got there the side of his face was tousled up and the egg hit him in the ear so hard that I bet some of it went out the other side of his head, and then we had Jubilee was going over the front fence like a pair of kangaroos and following the bunch down the road and the man after us, and the egg was so strong that I could almost smell it as fast and as we were going. Jubilee thought it was fun, and so did I when I found she was couldn't catch us.

I told Feeble that he couldn't so we slowed up till he would get near us and then we would put on just enough steam to keep out of reach. That way we got him to run a whole lot farther than he would of done if we had ran as fast as we could in the first place. I didn't mean to paint him, but a fella can't tell that to a fella he has pasted with a rotten egg. After a while he sat down on the side of the road and we went examining the rest of the dug

Herewith is the solution to yesterday's puzzle:

Love's Awakening

The Heart Story of a Woman's Lasting Affections

BY ADELE GARRISON

Madge Believes That Mary Is in Love.

I WAITED a minute before answering Harry Underwood's query concerning Mary's knowledge of the identity of Prince Georges, of Trees, for I wondered how much I really knew of the things going on inside the brain of Dicky's young niece.

"I am reasonably sure that she does not guess who he really is," I said at last, "although she has heard the version he and Princess Olina have given to the people, fortunately few in number, who needed to have an explanation of their status. Of course their real secret is known to Father, Katherine, Mr. Verriken, you and Lillian, and to Dicky and me. But Mother Graham, Marion, Mary and Noel, together with the Tiers, Katie, Jim and Otto, all of whom were involved more or less in that night's happenings, have been told that Olina is an heiress whose people wish her to marry an old man—part of the truth, you see, and that she is staying over here until her parents release. Georges is explained by saying that he is her cousin, and childhood playmate, in sympathy with her, and staying over here to look after her. This also is part of the truth for those royal families are all related in some way or other."

"Yes, that's what is the matter with most of them," Mr. Underwood commented dryly. "But has it ever struck you that young Georges is in the position of the well-known youth who could be happy with either, were Dobbin dear charmer away?"

Is Madge's Theory Right?

I looked at him in the surprise with which one hears another person voice a secret thought of one's own.

"Yes, I have thought of it often," I said. "He is very much attracted to Mary, however, fancies himself very much in love with her."

"Oh, yes," Mr. Underwood smiled, "one would well host, and all that sort of thing. But I'm wondering how he'll feel when he finds out."

He puffed himself up abruptly and looked a bit shamefacedly at me.

"I'm getting garrulous in my old age," he said. "Please forget I said that last, Lucy Fair. It hasn't anything to do with the price of onions, and I ought not to bother you with it if it had. But I would like to know your opinion on something else if you feel that you can tell me without violating any confidence. Where does Mary stand about Noel, I mean. Of course anybody with ordinary eyesight can see where Noel is perched. I never saw quite such a sighing humane in my whole life. But Mary's an enigma to youngsters, witness the last discovery you've made about her bank checks to that Janet Rawdon person. You've got one of the keenest brains I ever knew, do you figure that Mary's in love with Noel or Georges, or neither—perhaps with somebody with whom this Rawdon dame forms a link?"

I flushed with this compliment, parried it with an attempted jest.

"'Praise from Sir Hubert,'" I quoted, then hurried into the answer I did not need to consider, for I had spent many hours in asking myself the question Harry Underwood just had put to me.

"I think Mary is fascinated by the attentions of Georges, has a romantic affection for Noel strengthened by his father's opposition—and is in love—with her chance of a career."

"Your lips are too pretty to say a cruel thing like that," Mr. Underwood said chidingly.

"Why is it cruel?" I answered hotly. "Even if it be true—it is only my opinion, remember. Is it anything to a girl to discover that she rules her heart with her head, and puts her ambition first?"

He looked at me curiously.

"Is that the theory you're believing now, Lady Fair?" he asked.

GREAT RESULTS FROM COMPOUND

Read How This Medicine Helped This Woman

Brainerd, Minn.—"I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in a newspaper and I have got great results from its tonic action at the Change of Life. Before I took it I was nervous and at times I was too weak to do my housework. I was this way about a year. But now I do all my housework and do chores outside also. I must say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done wonders for me and no woman should be without it. I sure can speak a good word for it."—Mrs. Jos Brown, R. R. 7, Brainerd, Minnesota.
